

SUNY Ulster BPI Course Offerings Summer 2015

BPI Infiltration and Duct Leakage Certification:

Infiltration and Duct Leakage (IDL) certification is a task-oriented credential that verifies a candidate can successfully conduct air infiltration and duct leakage tests to the ASTM E1554-07 standard. Sometimes referred to as Duct and Envelope Tightness (DET) on the training side, earning the IDL certification is a simple, comprehensive and affordable way for technicians of home builders, remodelers, HVAC and insulation contractors to gain the skills they need to offer duct leakage and blower door tests, in compliance with IECC energy codes for new home construction. The IDL certification comes at a critical time for code officials, builders and their sub-contractors as they work to comply with IECC 2009 or 2012 codes that require blower door and duct leakage tests on new homes built.
